NESTING INSTINCT

Nest Bedding, a purveyor of premium eco-friendly mattresses and high-quality sleep products, has opened a Scottsdale showroom. The new location is the brand's first standalone Valley storefront—there are Nest and Brooklyn Bedding showrooms in Tempe and Surprise—and the 11th spot nationwide. Scottsdale shoppers can visit the 3,500-square-foot showroom to shop for mattresses, luxury bedding made of bamboo, certified Egyptian organic cotton and Tencel; plus a wide variety of pillows, pajamas, robes and pet beds. "Nestologists" are available to guide customers to find the right bed, sheets, nightwear and other products. "Our goal is to benefit the person by offering genuine relationships to guide you on a path to better, healthier, more quality sleep," says Johanna Mills, brand ambassador. "We care about the human walking in and what their individual needs are." 4821 N. Scottsdale Road, nestbedding.com -TKT

Rough textures were created with sandblasted cedar forms.

LET'S TAKE IT OUTSIDE

ON THE FENCE

Kornegay Design's new FencePost series of planters was inspired by the West's weathered cedar fence rails. The textured planters, designed by Phoenix artist Larry Kornegay, were shaped with molds formed with reclaimed cedar fencing that was sandblasted to reveal the wood's unique, rough texture. Made of high-strength concrete, the planters come in three sizes, multiple color options and were designed to serve as a natural-element contrast to the clean lines of contemporary architecture. "The FencePost series pushes what is nature and what is architecture," says Kornegay, whose firm was acquired by Landscape Forms last year. "The planters originated from wood." To the trade, landscapeforms.com -NBT
